

VACATIONING AT POWELL PLACE AT NOB HILL

One of the USA's most attractive cities, San Francisco's hilly streets provide some gorgeous glimpses of the San Francisco Bay and its famous bridges. This is a mosaic of a city, a big picture made from the colorful tiles of bustling Chinatown, the gentrifying Mission, Fisherman's Wharf, clubby SoMa, hippie Haight-Ashbury and bohemian North Beach. San Francisco is also home to some of the world's finest restaurants!

THE AREA

Downtown

Union Square is San Francisco's downtown tourist center. Cable cars rumble down the West side of the square; try looking down Hyde St towards Aquatic Park, down Washington St. to Chinatown and the Financial District, or down California from Nob Hill. And if you're in Nob Hill, ride the elevator to the Top of the Mark, the famous view bar at the top of the Mark Hopkins Hotel. SoMa (South of Market St) is a combination of lofty office buildings spilling over from the Financial District, fancy condos along the Embarcadero, a touristy gallery and museum precinct around Yerba Buena Gardens and the late night entertainment scene along Folsom and 11th Sts.

Chinatown

A few blocks north of Union Square is Chinatown, the most densely packed pocket of the city and one of its most colorful. It's a great place for casual wandering through narrow alleys, where on quiet afternoons you can hear the clack of mahjong tiles from behind screen doors.

North Beach

North Beach is sandwiched between Chinatown and Fisherman's Wharf. It's a lively stretch of bars, cafes and restaurants. The neighborhood is hemmed in on the east by Telegraph Hill, which features tree-shaded stairways that ramble down the steep eastern face of the hill, and Coit Tower. One of the city's most famous landmarks, the 360° views from here are superb.

Fisherman's Wharf

The massively popular Fisherman's Wharf is directly north of Russian Hill. Packed with shopping centers and oddball museums, it's also the gateway for several top attractions (Alcatraz, the Maritime Museum and the Historic Ships Pier). Pier 39 is the area's focal point - it's become as popular with a colony of sea lions as it is with tourists.

Haight-Ashbury

Just southwest of downtown you'll find Haight-Ashbury ('the Haight'), the locus of San Francisco's fame as the home of flower power in the late 1960s. Today, the Haight is still colorful with its pretty Victorian houses and proximity to Golden Gate Park.

Golden Gate Park

Golden Gate Park stretches almost halfway across the 6-mile (10km) wide peninsula, from the Pacific Ocean to the Haight's Panhandle. The park also has a host of museums and an aquarium, making it a useful escape even when the fog rolls in and the temperature plummets. The city has plenty of other wide-open spaces. Lincoln Park Coastal Trail is an interesting walk from the ruins of the Sutro Baths at Ocean Beach to the northwestern tip of the city, known as Lands End; there are some great views of the ocean and the Golden Gate Bridge. South of Golden Gate Park, the city's hilly terrain makes its final skyward lunges at Twin Peaks and Mt Sutro. The 900ft (270m) summit of Twin Peaks offers a superb viewpoint over the whole Bay Area, especially at night. There are viewpoints at both ends of the Golden Gate Bridge, but Vista Point, the northern one, not only gives you the bridge, but the San Francisco skyline as well.
